How Am I Carrying the Message?

At the last Area World Service Committee (AWSC) meeting, the Newsletter Coordinator asked for some volunteers to write an article about Al-Anon Service. I thought to myself “I love being involved in Al-Anon service, I can do that,” and so I put my name down on the list to write an article. I didn’t really have a plan as to what to say, except perhaps to outline all of the wonderful growth that I have experienced as a result of the many service opportunities that I have enjoyed and participated in over the years. I also thought that I could share some of the words of encouragement that I received from the “longtimers” when I was fearful of standing for, or taking on, a service position – for instance, “all you have to do is be willing to be willing,” or “Think Abundantly,” or “your HP hasn’t brought you this far, in order to let you fall,” “you never have to do anything alone, we will be there to support you,” and “how can I help you become successful?”

As I continued to think about what I would write, I started to have doubts about whether I have been as good at carrying the message of service as I thought I had been. Had I really been as supportive of others so that “they never have to do anything alone?” For instance, at the last AWSC meeting, a discussion was held, which resulted in a motion, to discontinue the Sunshiner Newsletter and to eliminate the Newsletter Coordinator position from the Area panel. For the last two years, the Newsletter Coordinator has been asking for help with the Newsletter and for people to submit articles in order to make it informative and relevant. Had I really been there to support those efforts? If I was being honest, I would have to say “no.” I occasionally submitted an article (like I am doing now), but I wouldn’t really classify that as being supportive. Did I copy and distribute the newsletter, did I let other members know they too could submit an article, did I even read it on a regular basis? Did I offer encouragement to the coordinator or congratulate her on a job well done? Probably not.

As I continued to think about carrying the message of service, I started to think about the 2017 AFG Florida South Convention. There has been a lot of negative feelings surrounding the location of this year’s convention – but that is not what I want to focus on. I would like to focus on the service aspect of a convention. That Al-Anon member, despite being full of fear, standing to volunteer as the convention chair at Assembly. An Al-Anon member who had a vision of taking the Area on a journey of growth and unity by Roaring into Recovery! The five dedicated executive committee members and 25 subcommittee members who have all volunteered their time, talents and efforts for eight months so that we can have a wonderful convention. They are our Trusted Servants - they are my and your friends!

It may, or may not, be too late for the Sunshiner Newsletter – it’s up to the Group Representatives at the Assembly to decide. So, the question is “How Can I Carry the Message of Service and Support the Convention?” Well, there is still time to register (the convention is in desperate need of all of our support!); there is still time to copy and distribute the registration form and let the members of my Group and District know about the speaker’s, workshops, fellowship and fun to be had at convention (enthusiasm is contagious!); and, there is still time to thank the committee for all of their hard work on behalf of the Florida South Area!

From a DR's Desk—

I remember how I'd been so delighted when our former DR would visit our meetings last panel during her reign. Hey everybody, this is our DR! I didn't understand why she didn't announce to everyone there that she was our DR; I didn't understand the cringe in her eyes as I asked her to tell everyone who she was. I didn't know, of course, until I walked a little while in her shoes.

I remember the very last weekly meeting I ever attended as the "DR." It was about half-way through the panel and I was in a very low period in my life; my husband was dying and I was devastated and not at all certain that I could keep going. Inner urgings had me attending more meetings than usual and had me holding on to my program with both hands. I'd gotten myself up and out for an early morning meeting and as I plopped down in my seat, I realized that I had nothing to give. I remember thinking to God that I don't have anything to give today; I guess I'll just have to receive.

I'd always felt it my duty to bring something positive to the table, after all, I'm the DR; I've got to be working an amazing program. I've got to keep the banner flying high. And here I was lower than low when I'd heard God give me one word: Despair. Despair? Yes, be willing to share your despair. And I did. In a room full of people who knew I was the DR, I shared that I had nothing to share, that I was so low I didn't know how I was going to keep going. I'd shared that I hadn't been this low in forever and that I was utterly and totally exhausted.

Something broke inside of me that day – I guess it was my resistance to being human. The members who crowded around me afterwards came to me with open hearts; there wasn't a harsh judgment amongst them. And that was the very last meeting I attended as the DR. I now know what it means to be a fellowship of equals and I will keep the peace of that understanding tucked in my heart forever.

From an AISL's Desk—

I started writing this article by putting down what the job requirements for being an Area Information Services Liaison (AISL) were, but that did not seem to answer the question "What did being an AISL on Panel 55 do for me?" I have responsibilities to the AIS and to the District.

I found that I could not ask the members of my district to do the job of answering the phones if I was not willing to do so. I signed on to do a shift each week. It was easy to learn how to hook my phone to the system, and it was early on that I learned how rewarding it was to speak and even help people who were calling Al-Anon for assistance. Another benefit that I found was that when my shift started on Tuesday afternoons, I would start to do some personal Al-Anon work while waiting for any calls to come in. I got program discipline and this led to me finding many new paths to go down within my program. I began scheduling my weekly meeting with my sponsee on Tuesday as well. It became my Al-Anon day.

It should not come as any surprise that listening to the people who finally got the courage to call made me both proud and humble; proud because I had taken that step too, and knew how hard it was and humble because all I did was hope to point the way for them to find their serenity.

Next came my discoveries at the district level. As AISL I was asked to coordinate the activities of the district committee chairs. My biggest and best lesson learned here was to be ready to help but not lead. I had to trust that each chair would do their job, and for the most part they did to a high degree of excellence. I also came to understand that in the few cases where things did not work out, I could offer help and receive help from the rest of the group. I found that my standards for doing something were PERFECT, but only for me. Others must be allowed to do it their own way.

This sense of support at the district level allowed me to offer to do something that I never would have thought I would take charge of. I offered to chair the day of workshops even though I didn't know the first thing about who, where, or how to get a location, where to get lunches made, and most scary of all, how to do a flier.

Turned out that I was directed to the person who would arrange rooms for us, a GR; an expert at both fliers and food and had that done in record time. All I had to do was what I do best, watch others do good work. Instead of being scary, it has become fun.

My term on the Area World Service Committee (AWSC) has also been a revelation and an opportunity for personal growth. Twice I volunteered to be on a committee because I had experience with regard to the job. In both cases it seemed to me that my experience was not needed. Instead of getting angry or resentful, I got out. I told the chair that it did not seem to be working for me. I did not stop volunteering however; I finally found a group that listened and appreciated what I had to offer. They were kind and understanding when I went into hiding for a few weeks and showed their unconditional love for me once I got back on track.

One of my major shortcomings is a lack of patience. During my time on Panel 55 I have had lots of opportunities to practice patience. As one slogan says, "Practice makes permanent." Now I don't "check out" when I disagree. I am better at not working on my response while others are talking, and I even listen and hear better. (My audiologist would disagree with the last statement, but you know what I mean.)

My time on Panel 55 has led to personal growth, a realization of both my known and previously unknown talents, and a better understanding of who Stu really is.

From The Very Beginning

In Al-Anon, I learned to live “one day at a time.” Before Al-Anon, I lived in yesterday with so many regrets I couldn’t have counted them all. Before Al-Anon, I also lived in tomorrow – filled with fears and apprehensions sufficient to drown me. How could I have possibly lived in the “now,” in “today,” with all that other stuff filling my head?

When I went to my first meeting, I sat in the parking lot for a long time, waiting for someone to come and open the door. In the time I waited, all I could think of was the “what ifs.” As usual, I was nervous and afraid. I was afraid I would not be welcome; I was afraid I was waiting to join a cult; I was afraid I would embarrass myself among strangers. My thoughts kept going to “Maybe I should just leave.”

A young woman parked near the building and approached the only door. As she did, I got out of my car, and with plenty of space between us, I called out “Are you here for Al-Anon?” She turned around and smiled, said “yes,” and invited me in. Her smile and greeting made me feel less discomfited.

When we got inside and she had turned on the lights, she told me there was a closet down the hall and in it I would find two coffee makers – not those little eight cup jobs we have on our kitchen counters, but two 30 cup urns that worked like Mom’s old stovetop percolator. I brought them to her while she was unlocking a cabinet and removing what I learned to call “literature” and the group’s binders. She smiled again and asked if I’d fill the urns to the appropriate line inside each. When that was done, she measured the coffee and inserted the percolating parts. While doing that, she asked me to go back to the closet and bring back all of the ashtrays.

Yes, thirty years ago we still smoked in our meetings

Finally, she asked me to go into two of the four rooms and set up the chairs in circles around the perimeter of the rooms. She set up the chairs in the other two rooms, and by that time people were beginning to arrive. Most were talking and laughing, and several offered to help with the chairs, as if I’d always been part of the group. Some greeted me as a newcomer and welcomed me.

By the time the meeting started, I was no longer apprehensive and no longer afraid. I was relaxed and comfortable. My head was not troubled by thoughts of yesterday nor with fears of what tomorrow might bring.

This narrative was my first introduction to service in Al-Anon; and although the names and most of the faces are lost to me, thirty years later, I still remember how the acts of welcoming me and keeping me busy had such wonderful effects on me. I have tried, in the intervening years, to always be of some kind of service in Al-Anon – in the group, among members, at the district, and at the Area. At every level, I have been made to feel welcome most of the time; my ideas were sought and my questions were answered in a kind and loving way. Criticisms were offered with kindness and tact in most cases. One of my Area service positions resulted in three of the most spiritually fulfilling periods in my life. Another Area service situation resulted in me feeling far more appreciated and wanted than I had in a long time.

Sometimes service in Al-Anon leads to challenges to be met and overcome. The person who walked into that room so many years ago would have bolted, never returning to face those days or places of challenge. Being fully involved in service, at and above the group level, brings me into contact with people at all levels of recovery. Service always gives me incentive and opportunity to try to actively live the Al-Anon 12 Steps, 12 Traditions, and the Concepts of Service. I have learned to use tools that keep me out of conflict and from embarrassing myself. It isn’t easy all the time; but, it always results in improvement in my life skills.

Without service in Al-Anon, I could not possibly have had the recovery that I have enjoyed.

A Look Back

This month marks Al-Anon's 66th anniversary. Celebrate this milestone by listening to what Al-Anon was like in the beginning. The Lois W. and the Pioneers Audio Interview was recorded in June 1982 with Lois W. (Al-Anon's co-founder), Henrietta S. (the first General Secretary of the World Service Office) and Margaret D. (the first editor of The Forum). It is now available as a free audio MP3 download on the Members website. This 110-minute interview includes much more information than the 22-minute DVD version. To listen, take these steps:

- * Go to al-anon.org/members.
- * Enter your group name, followed by the letters AFG as your password (Examples: Easy Does It AFG or mondayafg).
